Powerful Community Wind Model

Our community business model is different than traditional models. We create an independent, local, limited liability company for each project that facilitates the development of several wind parks. Individuals in the community become owners of the company. Our powerful community model has many benefits for landowners and the local economy:

MORE PROFITS REMAIN IN THE COMMUNITY

Community members are partners in our projects. For this reason, a significant portion of the development proceeds are retained within the community.

COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGES

A community wind project generally has strong local support. Utilities have a favorable perception of these projects, because they know that projects with local support are more likely to be permitted and completed.

LOCAL PARTICIPATION, OPEN COMMUNICATION

We are open and straightforward in our interactions. We incorporate landowner representation as part of our business structure. National Wind's development team works closely with the community throughout the project.

LONG-TERM COMMITMENT

As community-based developers, we have a long-term commitment to the land and our neighbors. We want to be proud of this project and the way it fits with our community. As partners in this project, our team is there from the "green field" throughout commercial operation.
